SALES TAX GRAB OPPOSED

Mattapoisett Selectmen received a letter from Anthony M. Scibelli, chairman of the Ways & Means Committee of the Massachusetts State House, warning of a proposal to divert 25% of Sales Tax money to the exclusive use of the State.

They have replied that the Board is opposed to diverting of 25% of Sales Tax to state use. They stated that the towns are faced with rising real estate taxes and they feel that the sales tax ought to be given a chance to work. They said, "We feel that you and your committee give this consideration before going out on a limb as we feel that any attempt to usurp these funds and divert them to the State will bring very strong reaction against you from the taxpayer".

33 CITIES & TOWNS INVITED TO FORM DEVELOPMENT CORP.

Mayor Edward F. Harrington of New Bedford has invited Mattapoisett Selectmen to attend a meeting August 11th at 7:30 P.M. at Wareham Town Hall. The purpose is to discuss the organization of a non-profit corporation comprised of 1 representative of each of 33 cities and towns in Southeastern Massachusetts, and including Tiverton, Rhode Island. This corporation would be known as the Southeastern Massachusetts Economic Planning & Development Corp.

BROOM ANYONE?

If the appearance of the library is different, it is because of the efforts of this group of workers who decided on Sunday to alter it. Because the entire length of the library park was littered with rubbish and shaggy with weeds the neighbors turned out with brooms and rakes and transformed the appearance of the entire street in a matter of an hour or so. Left to right, Don Powers, Dr. David Goodenough, Norm Frendberg, Dave Goodenough, Bill Powers and Tony Pelson at work.

AFS STUDENT TO LIVE IN MATTAPOISETT

Gunnar Tufveson, 18-year old student, will attend Old Rochester Regional High School as a senior this year under the American Field Service. Gunnar's American parents will be Mr. and Mrs. John Pagenkopf of Winnatuxett Beach Road, Mattapoisett with whom he will make his home during his stay in this country. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bengt Tufveson of Borlange, Sweden. His father is Office Systems Manager of the Domnarvet Steel Works in Sweden. He also has a younger sister.

Gunnar's hobbies are slalom skiing, ice skating, sailing and he also likes music and plays. He will be arriving in Mattapoisett about August 20th, and the Pagenkopfs are planning an Open House in his honor for late August or early September.

HOW MUCH? IS THE QUESTION

Many people have expressed interest in providing a decent bandstand for the Mattapoisett weekly concert but most have wondered about financing such a project. The bandstands in Marion and in Fairhaven, which are almost identical, provide a sounding board to project the music and provide very good protection for the musician from adverse weather conditions. They have storage space for chairs and racks, etc. An approximate figure for building this type of stand we have been advised is $5,000. It is possible that if some organization were to furnish some of the labor, that this figure could be reduced considerably. Even if it were not, ship under their belt, came within one point of taking the class "A" CYO Junior Championship only to lose by a single point in the final competition in September, 1965. A colorful marching unit, the Sabres are in red, white and black. The color guard consists of flags presented to the unit from different organizations and a ten girl section carries striped flags of red, white and black.

To date the Sabres have a total of 9 points in the CYO circuit leading all other units of their class. Out of a possible 30 points awarded this year, the Sabres have accumulated 29 in the Eastern Mass. Circuit. The record shows that this Middleboro group of youngsters is a top notch performing team and will put on a most entertainingly display in this Wareham appearance which will be sponsored by the Main Street Businessmen's Association.

Mr. Mendell enthusiastically described the exhibit as "one of the finest exhibits of old glass of all types to be seen in this area". The show will feature Sandwich, Pairpoint and Bristol glass. The Joseph Mendes' collection is large and colorful. Mr. Mendes is widely recognized for his extensive knowledge of Sandwich glass and he is the author of a book on this subject. The collection includes lamps, plates, dishes and paperweights. There is a fine collection of Pairpoint glass by one of the foremost authorities on that subject, Mr. George Avila. Mrs. Marjorie Root has loaned her display of Bristol and Sandwich glass and there are approximately 20 other smaller collections. The display is on view this week through Saturday at the Museum on the corner of Church and Baptist Streets in Mattapoisett center. Hours are 3 to 5 afternoons and 7 to 9 in the evening. TROUBLE IN THE STREETS

It seems that wherever there are people living closely, there are two opposing forces constantly locked in a struggle for domination. The forces of destruction are on the march and in popular favor at the present time. After the creative force is conquered and pride suppressed, it takes little time before the decay eats away at the beauty of the city or the town.

Have you looked down lately? Walk down any street and examine sidewalks and you will find that you are walking on a carpet of candy wrappers, old sneakers, soft drink cans and all manner of trash. Go to Shipyard Park and after you've taken in the beauty of the sea look down at the mess you have to wade through. Try to enjoy a picnic at Ned's Point, one of the most naturally beautiful spots any town could offer as a family park. You'd be hard put to find a moderately clean place to sit. Rubbish abounds and it soon will be the outstanding feature of the town.

The situation is not curable by public means. When the streets become a dump, no amount of money and effort can cope with the blizzard of trash. Nothing on earth can reverse this destruction of the beauty of the town except the pride and the thoughtfulness of the individual. Many people will remember Baltimore for a single thing. Every morning the Baltimore housewife washed the front steps of their row house which were usually white. These gleaming steps were the feature of that city. I wonder if they still bother.

We are among the most fortunate people on earth. We are surrounded by beauty. If we hold our heads high, we don't have to be ashamed of anything we see, but, never look down. D.C.J.

A Farm Boy's Memories of 100 Years Ago X

Among the enterprises Father's step-father, Uncle Ed Hammond, ran from his farm yard at the corner of the Neck Road was a wholesale slaughtering and butchering business. He bought livestock from farmers in Mattapoisett and Rochester, brought them to his barn yard, slaughtered them, skinned them, cut and dressed the meat into quarters or sides, and delivered the dressed meat to the wholesale markets in New Bedford.

From a very early age--7 or 8--during the summer, Father was frequently given the job of driving all over the surrounding countryside to pick up live-stock. When he was younger he fetched only the smaller animals, sheep, hogs, calves, young steers, etc.; but by the time he was 10 or 12 he was sent out to get the largest steers or oxen. The wagon in which he carried them was a four-wheeled, not too heavy, enclosed carriage--sides, front, roof. In the back opened a door through which the animals were loaded, being led up on a plank with cleats used as a temporary ramp.

Of course, most of the time Father needed help

The New England Insurance Rating Association has announced that effective August 5, 1966, Mattapoisett has been upgraded in classification. This will mean a reduction in the cost of fire insurance for most resident and property owners whose property is located within 1000 feet of a hydrant.
It will be difficult to process all policies through my office immediately. However, your next billing for fire insurance or Homeowner's policy will reflect this reduction retroactive to August 5, 1966.

in loading the animals, but most of the time the farmer was present to take charge. Once in a while though, the boy had to do it all by himself. On one trip, he had to go up the Rochester Road to a farmhouse near the Wheel of Fortune to get a fairsized steer. When he got there, the farmer was away for the day, so his wife was the only help available. She was a big woman, hard of face and loud of speech, and mean, who intimated that she'd take charge. Father was dubious, but being only a boy had to agree.

They led the steer from the barn by the rope round his neck, Father opened the back door to the wagon, slid the plank-ramp in place, and the woman started to lead the steer head first up the ramp. Father spoke up. He had had it drilled into him always to back the animal in the wagon to avoid getting a swift kick.

He and the woman argued. But of course, she got her way, and calling him scared-cat and similar names, she told him to take the rope and pull from inside the wagon while she guided the steer from behind.

Father had nothing to do but to yield and started to pull the animal up the ramp. They got him part of the way in when the woman, standing directly behind the steer, put both hands on his rump and pushed. Out flashed a hind foot that caught her square in the stomach, sending her heels over head backwards, and hurting her painfully. Father ran to a neighbor's for help, and then backed the steer in by himself.

When he got home, Father was worried lest the woman make trouble for him, but his parents reassured him. They knew she would never reveal her foolishness. After that Father, although he was sorry the woman was hurt, could not refrain from that very natural gleam of satisfaction that the mean old biddy had got what was coming to her by disregarding his advice.

On another such trip Father was as scared as he ever was in his life. One Saturday afternoon in spring he had collected a couple of medium-sized steers from a farm on the Perry Hill Road and was starting for home down the back road (Gammons Road) coming into Tinkhamtown from Acushnet. After passing a couple of farmhouses, this road entered quite a long stretch of woods, some of it swampy, with the road hardly above the level of the swampwater. It was early spring anyway, so the road was a mire of mud.

Father was considerably behind schedule, several things having not gone right that afternoon; and he found himself benighted just as he entered the wooded, swampy section. In a very short time he found himself in absolute darkness, the horse hardly able to follow the road. Father lit the carriage lamp, but its pale light only made the dark darker. The horse was tired, the load was heavy, in the low places the horse could hardly lift each foot out of the sucking mud, the darkness was like a wall; the situation was eerie for an eleven year old boy.

But they plodded along in complete silence except for the sound of the sucking mud, when instantly, without a second's warning, the wagon dropped a foot and a half and brought up on its axles, and Father's heart leapt up and brought up in the back of his throat. They had hit a quagmire over a small spring. So there they were; wagon mired up to its bottom, a floundering horse, two plunging, kicking steers, and one panic-stricken boy--all in darkness as black as Hagar's hip.

After a few minutes the panic subsided enough for Father to gather his wits, take off the carriage light, and start groping his way along the edge of the road to the next farm. It was a long, exhausting walk, but he got there. He routed out the farmer--presenting to sight one of the muddiest boys the farmer had ever seen --and explained his predicament. The latter lit a lantern, got out his yoke of oxen and a heavy chain, and they started back. It was quite a struggle, but the oxen finally hauled the wagon clear and along the low road to higher ground.

All this took time, and Father still had five miles to drive, mostly at a walk. When, about 10 o'clock, he rounded the Herring Weir corner and shortly turned into the farmyard at the head of the Neck Road, he found quite a bit of activity going on. Lanterns were passing back and forth, his mother stood in the kitchen doorway wringing her hands, and Uncle Ed and the hired man were hitching up a carriage to set out as a searching party.

But all Father wanted was something hot to eat, a hot bath in the wooden tub in the kitchen, and the reassuring comfort of his own bed--safe within four familiar walls.
